

ABSTRACT

A method of exposure projecting and exposing a pattern formed on a mask on to a photosensitive substrate through a projection optical system, comprising the steps of measuring a position of an image projected by said projection optical system; and projecting and exposing said pattern of the mask in a state with imaging characteristics corrected to reduce an amount of offset of a position of said projected image from an ideal position.